ABOUT ACHS

As the only animal shelter in the county, the Addison County Humane Society (ACHS) works hard to meet the needs of our growing and changing population. Since 1975 we have provided temporary shelter for lost, abandoned, abused or surrendered animals. Our programs and services meet a wide array of critical animal welfare needs and we provide them without any county, state or federal funding. We are a "no-kill" shelter, meaning we do not euthanize animals for space and ensure every adoptable animal a permanent home.

ACHS PROGRAMS

Spaying and Neutering

In addition to sheltering and adoption, ACHS spays or neuters hundreds of dogs and cats every year including all adopted animals old enough for the procedure and aggressive follow-up for those too young when they leave us.

Lost and Found Services and Low Cost Micro-Chipping

ACHS works hard to help reunite owners with their lost pets. In an effort to more quickly facilitate these reunions, ACHS offers easy and affordable micro-chipping for cats and dogs.

ACHS INITIATIVES

Humane Education and Outreach

Educating children about responsible pet ownership is a critical component to improving animal welfare and combating pet overpopulation. As such, ACHS hosts and visits hundreds of area school children as an effort to provide humane, animal-related educational opportunities in Addison County.

Humane Law Enforcement

ACHS has played the leadership role in county humane law enforcement fielding over 400 cruelty reports over the past five years. In 2004, ACHS launched the Addison County Anti-Cruelty Coalition, the first ever coalition of its kind in Vermont. The coalition brings together law enforcement agencies, animal control officers, humane officers, vets, rescue organizations and government officials to strengthen the effectiveness of humane enforcement and facilitate aggressive prosecution of offenders throughout the county.
